O concentrate, therefore, all the injurious tendescript of this arbitrary act: —
This novel act deprives us of our right of trial by a conflitutional Jury.

This novel ad deprives us of our participation in the inestimable act of Habens Corpus.

This novel an deprives us of our option, and com pels us to appear as evidence against our dearest friends. It, therefore, loofens the bonds of fociety, the first affections of the heart, and tends to convert the nearest relations of life to snares of dishonour and destruction.

This novel act is stained with illiberality, and pregnant with despotifin. It taints the effence of the conflicution; it pollons the fource of freedom; it delitroys the foundation of those liberties which are at once the pride and glory of our country.

And, finally, it introduces an idea, which ever the Minister, in the plenitude of his power, and the precipitation of his projects, bath not dared to avow that by entering into the fervice of the East India Company, we have relinquished all our most valuable privileges as members of the Britis empire.

If there are grievantes, it is sufficient to state the fact, it is supposed to the comment—that they demand reduces; for certainly this nefarious act can be viewed in no other light than as a libel upon the fervice in general, and upon all others who may have been attracted to the country by a spirit of sercial enterprise; and if we submit to it sub flentie, our filence will doubtles be considered as acquiescence in the justice of its aspersion. It, therefore, behaves us to exert every just and conthitutional means to promote its repeal, and to sindieate our characters to the world from the unmerised obloquy to which it dooms them; for what will be the inevnable refult of our patient acquiel cence, but an implication of our culpability? Will not posterity consider, that in our criminality origi-nated this wound to the constitution, and that our vices forged the first link of flavery's chain? Wil hey not devote us to deathless execration? Will they not confign us to never-dying infamy? It is then that the irritated hillorian of these times shall then that the irritated historian of these times shall glowingly record our baseness upon the unperishable page of history, and awaken the indignation of sure generations against us! It is then that he shall imprint upon the tablet of their memory this painful tale. That, at such a period, there existed a race of British subjects in India, whose trapacity was so unbounded, whose cruelty was so unparalleled, and whose offences were so deeply enormous, that even the common law of the land, littherto found adequate to the trial and punishment of a murderer, was cemed infufficient for the conviction of these more flagitious delinquents; and that, in order to bring their offences within the pale of punishment, it was necessary to violate Magna Charta, and to convulse us fabric of British freedom which has long been the applauding theme of admiring ages! It is then that we shall be loaded with the bitterest

It is then that we shall be stoaded with the bitterest curses of nations unborn, in ages to come!

But what will be the confequence of governing these distant countries upon such narrow and oppressive principles? Many, loathing the ingratitude of their countrymen, will expatriate themselves for ever, and become attached to these climes, whilst own, thers will emigrate into foreign countries to live be-neath the protection of milder laws. That is no country to me that does not cherith, foster, and proted me in all my native rights in my honelt fame, my liberty, and fortune! Here the beautiful apo-drophe of Mr Additon, in his epittle to Lord Halirushes upon my mind with captivating force.

and charms me to repeat it :-

O Liberty, thou goddefs, heavenly bright?
Profuse of bless, and pregnant with delight?
Eternal pleasures in the presence reign.
And smiling plenty leads the wanton train,
Tas d of her load, subjection grows more light,
And powerty looks chearful in the sight.
Thou mak'll the clooney face of nature gay.
Given because to the sin, and pleasure to the day.

Independently, then, of the tie of family connec that is it that renders our native country peculiarly dear to us, but the blefling of living under a free government? Deprive us of that enjoyment, and there are few countries in Europe which do not offer faporior comforts; for if, upon our return to Great Britain, we become cultivators of the foil, one half of the produce of our effaces, will be fwalone half of the produce of our effaces, will be fwal-lowed up in a variety of taxes to support that pref-fure of sational differs under which the stare has been long success. But this is not the case in any other country to which we may retire. Therefore, unless the exceptionable parts of this act are repeal-ed. England will inevitably sustain a considerable loss of subjects and of wealth, at a period when most the has becasion for the support of both to aid in re-sistence has food homes. of her unwieldy debt: How much then does it become the wildom and equity of Administration, to reflect foboriy and dispationately upon these circumflances, and, by redreshing our grievances, to guard against the probability of their happening? Faction has too long usurped the reins of government; but now, that in degrading her country her triumph has been complete, it is time that milder reason should re-assume her gentle sway. Whither we shall fly to avoid oppression, in the event of the continuation of this new and odious power, can never be the question of a moment; for, o'er the wide range of Europe, fee foreign liberality extended to shield us from these intemperate gults of ministerial persecu-tion! There, unreviled by faction, and unexposed to the capricious frown of authority, we shall tran-quilly enjoy our estates, and viewing at a distance the encreasing gales of national contention, we may ealmly bid defiance to their turbulency and force!

It might, Gentlemen, have been expected, that the infittution of a tribunal, the nature of which is utterly subversive of every idea of civil liberty to those upon whom its despotic powers are meant to be exercifed, subvertive of the hereditary freedom and determined and effectual opposition which so alarming a measure deserved, and that its authors, in wounding the constitution, would have been expo-fed to the resemment of an insulted nation. But the minds of the relemment of an infured manon. But the minds of them in England were prepared for the event; their feelings were initiated by the artial and captivating declaration of popular speakers a their pity was awakened by the fabalous recital of imaginary diffress; and their judgments were warped by the intemperance of public debate, which at that period generally diffured itself throughout the nation. Every bale art to which malevalence could have recourse, was adopted to calumniate and swrite us a courfe, was adopted to calumniate and revile us; and it was during the tumultuous phrenzy which enfued upon the triumph of pation over reason, that the nation were deluded into a measure as injuriou to our rights as it is fatally dangerous to their own a measure that, in the cooler moment of returning reason, mult appear to them fraught with impend ing danger, and strikingly calculated to produce the downfal of the constitution. For, the same ar-guments which have been used by the ministry in the prefent instance, will equally apply to every di-stant part of their dominions, and in this is esta-blished a precedent, on which an during and proffi-gate administration may at some figure period found the necessity of a similar mode of judicature, for the detection of guilt, and the punishment of offences in the other dependencies of the empire; and thus will bewhich will in a flort time pierce the confitution to its vitals. The moment that fuch inquiriorial courts are tolerated, and their proceedings to perently admitted of by Britons; the inflant that fuch tribunals shall thus become, and be regarded as a c part of the constitution, farewell to our beafted freedom! to that birth-right, and to those privileges which give us our proper rank in the scale of pations The whole glorious fabric will at once disappear, and eave not a trace behind it, except the fad remembrance, that British liberty had once existed I

And shall we be the first, who servilely bending to the yoke, who quietly acquiescing in the arbitrary dispensation of an ambitious minister, and an oppressive senate, begin to overthrow the freedom of our native foil, and tamely wear the galling chain of despotism! No! I trust that the spirit, which we have inherited from our ancestors, will still continue to hold its influence in our minds, and that we sliable to evince to our deluded countrymen, and to the world at large, that the relaxing influence of the climate has not fo far debilitated our hearts, or weakened our understandings, as to induce us to rights as men, and as Englishmen, in passive filence; or that we are so lost to every sense of honder, to every regard for personal dignity, as to stand with patience before a tribunal where our characters are to be put to the rack; where dark info koned by the hand of power, with an interested ma-lignity, and a perjuty heedles, because secure, may rime lay proffrate the honour of our lives and thrip us of the produce of our labours; and where we are to be dependent upon the mercy of a court, whose jurisdiction stands courter to the ordinances of our ancestors, and whose judgment every other Englishman would feel handels ampelled by that inborn fpirit of freedom, which fuperfeder all law, to fourn and reject! Rather than degrade ourfelves to low, we ought to relinquish our national attachment, and obliterate from our minds every early prepoffession in favour of a country that has exposed us to such contumely! Tell me, Gentle-men, shall the people of England, blest with every aventage of climate, society of friends, the manual interchange of family affection, trample thus was tonly upon those who, by the facrifice of every fond tie, of every dear connection, have given an empire to the native country? who, with often the loss of health, and at belt, by a long and painful relidence in a climate uncongenial to their conflicutions, have accumulated a moderate competency as a shelter for the evening of their day? Shall they, like fekons; he dragged before fuch an inquisition! shall the widter of a life, wasted in the service of their country, be unfeelingly rendered a feason of joyless existence? No! perish the idea! vanish a thought fo repugnant to the feelings of a British mind! Is this the descendant of the illuffrious Pirr? Is this the youthwhom nature graced with ripened talears in the morn of life! Is this the afferter of his country's caute? Is this the guardian genius of her facred rights? O venerable shade of immortal CHATHAM I how would thy patriot belom, warmed by freedom's flame, now glow with generous indignation, could'ft ther but view thy favourite (on, whom nature kindly deffined to emulate thy virtue, and share thy deathless fame, thus tarnish the infancy of his career? Look down, bright spirit! and behold him feated on the eminence fporting with the happiness of millions, and habbing of that power which once thy virtues radiated the freedom of his country? Look down, divine er manation of unrivalled goodness? and through the immensity of all created space, swift let that towering eagle eye of thme dart its indiguent frown to recal him into glory's arms ! fwift let it flath to his recollection the curfe that waits the man " Who ower his greatness to his country's ruin."

But, Gentlemen, the opinion at prefent enter-tained of us at home is fuch, that fo far from our being confidered as entitled to a common participa-tion in the conflitutional rights of Britons, we are fearcely looked upon as deferving of the name of men. Neither has the injurious light in which we are beheld originated in any calval prejudice or malicious bias against us in the hearts of our countrymen-it is the fatal refult of a concerted plan; of deliberate delign.

The Proteus, after whom the Bank Directors for near four tedions years kept up a fruitless chace, was taken in the Roll at a moment he fondly hoped the hunters had loft the fcent-vanity was the rock on which he split-it was his custom at times to give entertainments to a felect party, and in order to avoid the plate tax, to borrow the fplendid articles of the fideboard at a pawnbroker's, depositing bank notes as fecurity—the Pawnbroker happening to offer one at the Bank, was flopped, and on relating how he came by it, with all the eircumstances, proper people were fent to the shop—this modern Volpone came to return the place, and was im-

The arrival of Lord Macantaey has greatly per-plexed the Cabinet: the Minister had consented to his appointment to the important office of Governor General of Bengal, because his Lordship had always shown a strong disposition to obey and carry into ef-fect all the orders he received from his constituents; and because it is by such obedience only that the Board of Controul can prevent the Company's ferwants from hurrying the empire at large into a war whenever they please. There hath been already several meetings between the Minister and the Directors of the East India Company, for the purpose of fixing upon a proper person to be sent our to govern Bengal; for it has been agreed upon on all hands, Bengal, for it has been agreed upon on all hands, that Mr Macpherian, not polletting the confidence either of the army or civil officers of the Company, it was not fit that he should hold the govern for a longer time than will be necessary for the arrival of a successor. Mr Hastings has actually been founded on the occasion, and has frankly confessed that he has no of ection to ferre the Company and the Public in India; but at the fame time he has declared, he never would confent to return to his formet flation, unless some parts of the new regulation bill shall have been previously repealed. It is therefore generally believed now, considering the disposition of the army and civilians in Bengal, and the backwardness of the most able men in this country to ferve under that bill, that Mr Pitt will confent to propose a modification of it, early in the enfuing fellion.

AT an adjournment of a Meeting of the Gentlemen and Farmers in the county of Berwick, held frere this day for taking into confideration the prefent state of the Distillery Laws, they also took into confideration copy of a bill intended to be brought into Parliament, for the amendment of the high roads in that county, by erecting gertain. Tollagates, and a total alteration of the prefent mode of collecting, the money for statute services over the county. They were of opinion, That there is no good cause for altering the present mode, which appeared to all parties concerned in the A772, to be the most equitable that could be then derifed and that the new one proposed, by levying statute services according to valued rent, appears to be, of all others, the most unequal that could be fallen upon. They were likewise of opinion, as to the erection of Toll-gates, there being no thorough-sair in the county, that the whole expence will fall upon the inhabitants of the county, and very unequally upon these; and therefore they unanimously resolve to ope pose said tenants, many of whom will be much aggrieved by the faith bill, to loin them in opposing a scheme so unequal, and in many cases oppressive.

If the promoters of the bill persist in carrying it shrough in its present shape, a meeting will be adverted to be held by those who think themselves aggrieved by it, at a fature day. At same time, the Meeting are willing to routribute their just proportions on any equitable scheme, for the amendment of the high toads in the county.

Thefe lands confirt, conform to a plan, of 796 Scots acres of property, and 264 acres feued out to different persons; all holding of the Crown, are rated in the land and tooks at 12191, 11 s. 8 d. Scots; and the purchaser will have right to the tithes.

The nett rent of the land effect (exclusive of the coal) for crop 1783, was 7621. 7 s. Sterling, including therein the price of 20 bolls malt, and 54 bolls out meal, at 16 s. per boll.

boll.

There is a large Manfion-house with fuitable offices. Also a large garden and orchard, and a pigeon-house on the premisses, and a salmon silhing at l'allimpow, none of which are included in the rent-roll. There is also a great number of fine sull grown timber trees, constituing of oak, alb, beach, and elm, &c. of considerable value; with several young plantations of various kinds of wood, very thriving.

The lands are generally inclosed and subdivided, partly with stone dykes, and partly with thriving hedges.—From their situation in a populous country, where extensive manufactures are carried on, and where coal, and all the articles of living are cheap; and from their vicioity to lime, and good living are cheap; and from their vicinity to line, and good roads, they are capable of great improvements, and increase of rem. Some farms are now open, which will rife; and hence, a confiderable advance may be depended on over the whole eftate; and great advantage may be derived from fem-ing, and from erecting mills on the warr of Bannockburn.

which a level is carried up. Alto two yearly fairs, and a weekly market.

The coal of Bannockburn is extensive, consisting of different fears, level free, and is well known to be of the best quality, and of great value. It has for years past yielded a nett profit, after defraying on-coat and all expenses, of about 15001, per annum, as will appear from the coal books, and it has be wrought to a much greate extent if the proprietor in-clines: For, befides the demand from the town of Stirling and the country around, there is a harbour and fold and other con-veniencies at Fallinpow, on the Frith of Forth, belonging to the effate; where a fea fale may be carried on to a great advantage.

A purchase in itself more complete, of better and more convenient lituation for intercourse with Edinburgh, Glasgow, Stirling, and the Frith of Forth, &c. and capable of higher improvement, rarely occurs in the market.
